The diagram illustrates a sequence of message merging. On the left, there are four vertical stacks of two 'BYE' messages each. The first two stacks are labeled M1, the next two M2, the next two M3, and the last two M4. Lines from the right side of each stack converge to form two intermediate nodes, M5 and M6. M5 is formed by the first two stacks, and M6 by the next two. These two intermediate nodes then converge into a final node, M7, which is connected to a single horizontal line on the right, representing the output.
